Royals stay alive, 6-1

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Kansas City speed connection of Lonnie Smith and Willie Wilson sent a signal, loud and clear: Time has not yet expired on the American League champion Royals.

The Royals' No. 1 and 2 hitters sparked an offensive surge Thursday night that carried Kansas City to a 6-1 victory in Game 5 of the World Series against St. Louis.

The victory cut the Cardinals' advantage in the best-of-seven Series to three games-to-two and sent the Series back to Kansas City for Game 6 Saturday. The Royals will send left-hander Charlie Leibrandt, the hard-luck loser of Game 2, against Cardinal right-hander Danny Cox, who won Game 2 with the aid of four ninth-inning runs.

"What keeps us coming back is that World Series ring," Wilson said. "We want to win it. We were thinking about taking this back home. Nobody thought about losing."

With Danny Jackson pitching in and out of trouble in the early going despite allowing only five hits, Wilson and Smith spearheaded an 11-hit attack, matching the Royals' offensive output in their 6-1 victory in Game 3. Smith had two hits and scored a pair of runs, and Wilson had two hits, including a triple and a pair of RBI.

"I'M IN A good groove, the groove I like to be in," Jackson said. "I concentrated harder tonight, especially with our backs to the wall."

The Royals scored once in the first inning against Bob Forsch, then added three more in the second, beginning with the first controversial call of the Series in a disputed play at home plate argued vehemently between Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog and umpire John Shulock. "Too much Danny Jackson tonight," Herzog said. "We haven't done too much with him the last two times we faced him. The ballclub isn't hitting. They're pitching well, but you'd think we would get a few hits every now and then."

Still left for the Royals was an unenviable task. They had fallen behind 3-1 in the Series Wednesday night when they were shut out 3-0 by John Tudor. Of 34 previous teams to face such a deficit, only four had gone on to win the Series, the last being the 1979 Pittsburgh Pirates.

But the Royals had come back from such a deficit against Toronto in the AL

Hawks defend No. 1 spot again

By Mark Dukes
Gazette sports editor

On the seventh Saturday of its season, Iowa's mission is simple and straightforward.

"The biggest thing for us is to go there, win and stay injury-free," said Hawkeye Coach Hayden Fry.

The No. 1-ranked football team in the country is a 24-point favorite to preserve its unbeaten record in a 1:30 p.m. game at Northwestern's Dyche Stadium. The Big Ten game is not a sellout and it will not be televised.

Should Iowa win, it would have a 7-0 record for the first time in 63 years. The 1900, 1921 and 1922 teams all started with seven straight victories.

Although Iowa has dominated Northwestern in recent years, winning 11 straight times, Fry believes the Wildcats are no longer the Mildcats.

"I'm more worried this week than I would be against Michigan or Ohio State," he said. "Northwestern doesn't have the glamor or tradition of those teams, and that's what makes it tough in terms of preparation."

"Northwestern has made consistent progress under Denny Green. In fact, I'm Denny's biggest fan because I can relate to sick programs and turning them around. He'll win some more games this season.

"Probably the biggest item about them is they play wild on defense. The like to punish and hit people. Plus, their offense has the capability of scoring a lot of points."

Whether Fry's comments are pure rhetoric or stark reality may be debatable. Nevertheless, Fry probably is right that Northwestern is catching the Hawks at an opportune time, a week after they played Michigan and a week before going to Ohio State.

At 3-3 overall, Northwestern is off to its best start since 1971. Last week, the Wildcats won at Wisconsin, 17-14, on John Duvic's late 42-yard field goal. Two weeks ago, Iowa won at Wisconsin, 23-13.

"That win lends credibility to our program," said Green. "Now we're looking forward to playing the No. 1 team in the country."

"Each year, Iowa has gotten better. As many players as they lost on defense last year, it's amazing they can be so aggressive and talented. Their combination of offense and defense is what makes them so successful."

There is only one change in Iowa's starting lineup. Red-shirt freshman David Hudson is slated to open at fullback ahead of Fred Bush. Hudson is averaging 4.4 yards per carry, Bush 2.0.

Iowa cornerback Ken Sims was seen in a class Wednesday with a cast on his right hand, according to one report. If Sims is unable to play, his replacement would be freshman Keaton Smiley.

Northwestern has been hit hard by injuries, losing five starters in the past few weeks.

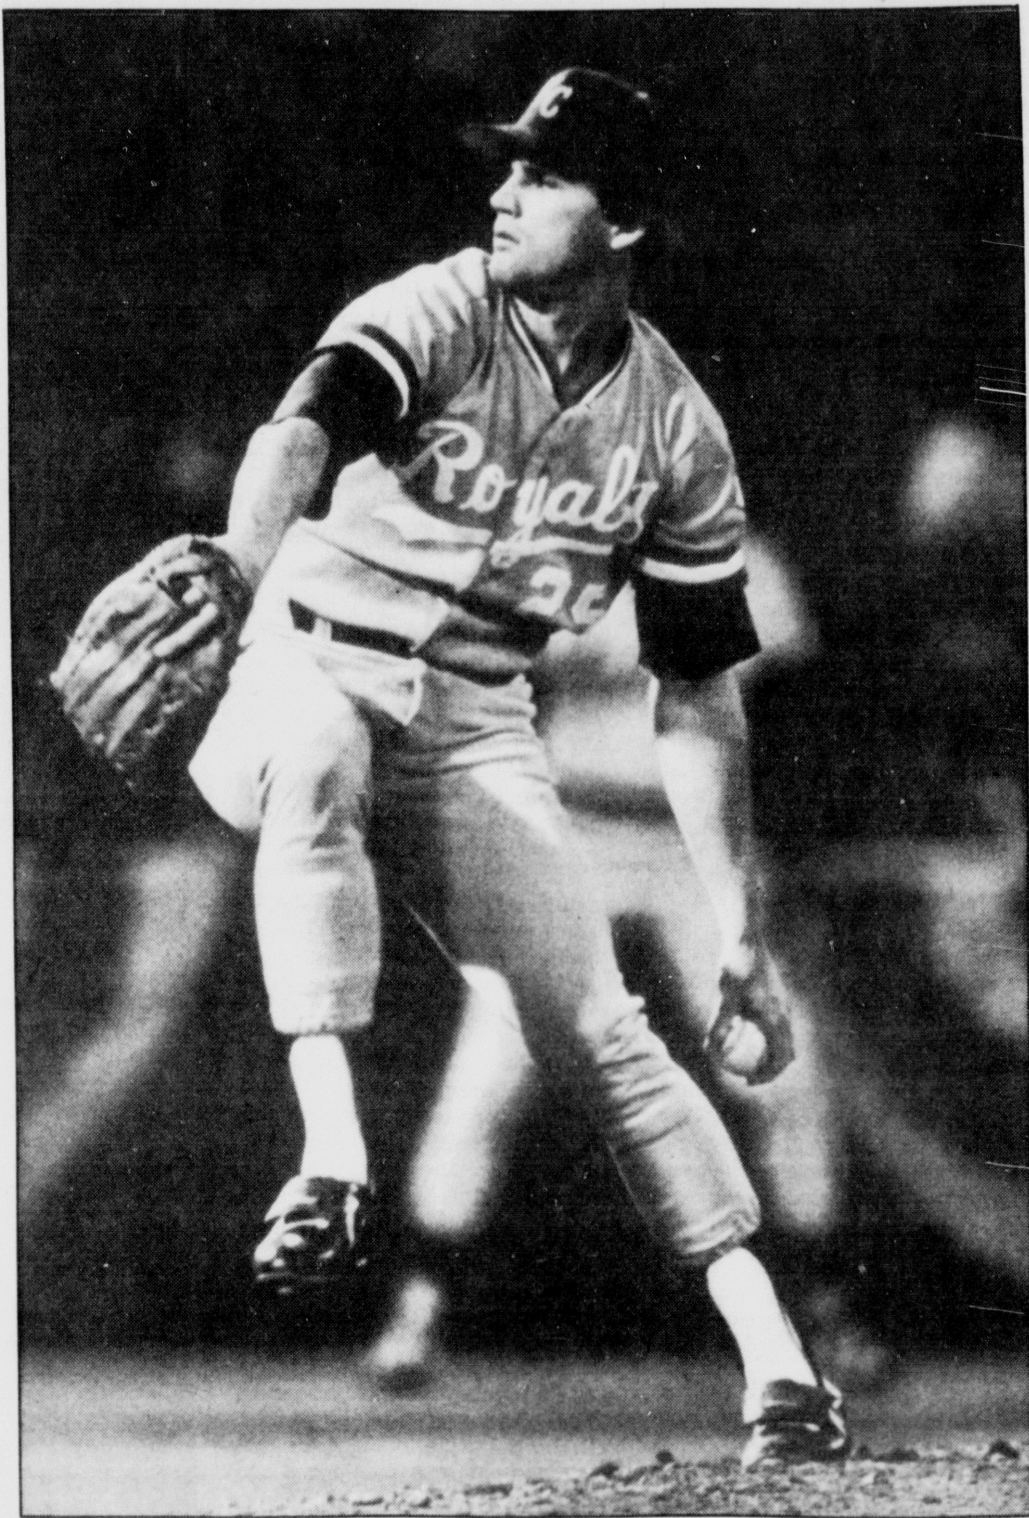

In the last six seasons, Iowa has defeated Northwestern by a combined score of 284-40, a per-game average of 47-6. The closest game in that span was a 25-3 Iowa win in 1980.

Iowa quarterback Chuck Long will play against Northwestern for the fifth straight season. In four years, he has completed 52 of 73 passes for 828 yards and six touchdowns against the Wildcats.

Long completed his only pass attempt against Northwestern in 1981. An NCAA ruling allowed Long to take '81 as a red-shirt year, even though he played in one regular-season game and the Rose Bowl.

Last year in Evanston, it was running back Ronnie Harmon who did the most damage. He rushed 24 times for 121 yards

Jeff rallies past Kennedy

Jefferson's J-Hawks haven't won much this season but looked like anything but quitters in rallying past stubborn Kennedy, 20-13, in Mississippi Valley Conference play Thursday night at Kingston Stadium.

The victory pushed Jefferson's record to 2-4 in the Valley, 2-6 overall, while Kennedy slipped to 2-5, 2-6.

Randy Meier's nifty 14-yard touchdown run with 30 seconds left was the game winner.

Meier, who cut back against the grain at the five on the TD run, also plunged around the right end for the two-point conversion.

The winning score followed Dan Heiken's interception at the Cougar 42 with 4:06 left and capped a fourth quarter which the J-Hawks dominated, running 22 plays to Kennedy's eight in the period.

"This is a tribute to the kids," Jeff Coach Bill Calloway said. "It's hard to be in this position. But we have never had a bad

Lester injured as NBA season starts

Associated Press

Of the 16 head coaches pacing the sidelines at tonight's eight season-opening National Basketball Association games, the biggest butterflies will belong to New Jersey's Dave Wohl.

Wohl is one of three coaches making his debut as a head coach, but the other two — Matt Guokas of the Philadelphia 76ers and Bernie Bickerstaff of the Seattle SuperSonics — have to wait until Saturday to get started. Wohl and the Nets, meanwhile, have to face the defending Eastern Conference champion Boston Celtics.

Wohl was an assistant coach for Los Angeles last season, when the Lakers beat the Celtics in six games to win their third NBA title of the decade.

FORMER IOWA guard Ronnie Lester will miss Los Angeles' opener at San Antonio Saturday and at least four more games. Lester, who was placed on the Lakers' injured-reserve list Thursday, is suffering from tendinitis in his left knee.

Another former Hawkeye guard Bob Hansen, now with Utah, will start in Darrell Griffith's backcourt spot for the Jazz against Houston tonight. Griffith has a broken foot and could miss the first half of the season.

Other openers tonight include Washington at Atlanta, Milwaukee at Detroit, Cleveland at Chicago, the Los Angeles Clippers at Sacramento, Denver at Golden State and Phoenix at Portland. The Clippers-Kings meeting marks the first NBA game ever at the California capital.

ISU makes 1st road trip to No. 10 Oklahoma

By Jim Ecker

Gazette assistant sports editor

The Iowa State Cyclones venture into the great unknown Saturday afternoon when they play their first road game of the 1985 season at 10th-ranked Oklahoma.

Kickoff at Memorial Stadium is scheduled for 1:30, with the Sooners' 66th straight sellout crowd of 75,000 expected. That much is known. Other factors are not.

For instance:

• Which ISU team will show up, the one that upset Kansas, 22-21, two weeks ago, or the one that floundered, 40-6, against Colorado last Saturday?

• Can the Cyclones duplicate their outstanding effort of a year ago, when they outplayed Oklahoma in Ames before losing, 12-10, or will OU carve another notch in the most lopsided series (51-4-2) in Big 8 history?

• Will Jim Criner stick with Alex Espinoza, the eighth-leading passer in ISU history, or will Derek "Rio" DeGennaro draw his first start against the nation's top-ranked defense?

• How will the Sooners operate with freshman Jamelle Holieway at the wishbone controls, and will Spencer Tillman (sore hamstring) return to the backfield after a three-week absence?

• Can the Cyclones, ranked 103rd in the nation on offense (out of 105 teams), mount an attack against Oklahoma, or will the overtaxed

ISU defense claim squatter's rights after spending most of the afternoon on Owen Field?

IRONICALLY, BOTH head coaches are worried about OU's Holieway at quarterback, but for different reasons. Troy Aikman, the Sooners' No. 1 QB, broke his fibula (lower leg) in a 27-14 loss to Miami, Fla., last week.

"The thing that concerns me most about Oklahoma is the loss of their starting quarterback," claims Criner. "It concerns me what they'll do differently to compensate for that loss. They might use something new this week that we can't pick up from the game film."

Barry Switzer, 11-0-1 in his career against Iowa State, says his Sooners won't pass as well without Aikman, who had given OU's wishbone a new dimension with an aerial attack. "We can't do that with a 5-9 quarterback," counters Switzer.

Oklahoma lists all freshmen and sophomores at quarterback, fullback, left halfback and right halfback. Lydell Carr, a 6-2, 215-pound fullback, leads with 323 yards in four games, but Criner expects to see Tillman, OU's best back, on Saturday.

Conversely, ISU hopes tailback Marques Rodgers, the club leader with 287 yards, can play after getting banged up against the Buffaloes. Andrew Jackson gets the nod if Rodgers can't play.

Missed the tag?

ST. LOUIS — A telling argument against the use of TV instant replays to decide crucial calls in sports was illustrated graphically in Thursday night's World Series game.

It came in the second inning when Jim Sundberg, Kansas City, catcher who refined his art at the U of Iowa, tried to score from second on a single by Buddy Biancalana.

ABC's TV cameras showed two excellent angles of Sundberg's head-first slide. Cardinal catcher Tom Nieto took the throw and dived for Sundberg.

Well, only one of the two angles was excellent. In the other, the camera's view of Nieto's mitt, which contained the ball, was partly obscured by Umpire John Shulock, who ruled Sundberg safe.

GUS SCHRADER
Gazette sports columnist

Know what that taught me about the use of instant replays as the ultimate means of ruling on close decisions?

None of the TV cameras had a better view than Shulock. No matter how vigorously Manager Whitey Herzog beefed, he could not accuse Shulock of being out of position.

So let's pretend the big leagues permitted instant replays as the final authority. The super umpire seated somewhere with a look at all the TV monitors would have had to use those limited views and then maybe over-ruled an umpire who had the best position in the world in the first place.

From my seat in the auxiliary pressbox down the third-base line in Busch Stadium, I had a good look at the play originally. There are big TV monitors all along the press row, so I watched the many replays, too.

From somewhere up high in the outfield stands I thought I could hear the voice of Bob Uecker shouting, "He missed the tag! He missed the tag!"

• Before Thursday night's game, I caught up with the Royals' George Brett and asked if the Series was going back to Kansas City.

"Hey, we've got 'em eating out of our hand now," the slugger replied with hearty bragadaccio. "Feed 'em a little bird seed, right?"

A sportswriter friend of mine overheard. "Brett said the same thing in Toronto when the Royals were trailing 3-1, too," he recalled. Hmm, Brett didn't even have to change his terminology, as those were the birds (Blue Jays), too.

• John Wathan, who says he doesn't know why Manager Dick Howser hasn't used him more, remains a good company man despite his disappointment. Even in the playoffs and World Series, Wathan pitched batting practice every third day.

"It keeps my arm in shape, and it helps the coaches out," Wathan explained. He said he doesn't know what the future holds, but he has two years left on his contract.

• Another Kansas City reserve catcher, Jamie

Quirk, holds an unusual all-time record in big-league baseball. Know what it is?

No, Quirk is no threat to Pete Rose's career hitting record. But he is the all-time career home run leader for players whose last names start with "Q."

I asked him about that Thursday. "That's right," he smiled. "I've got 15 homers in my career, and they tell me the previous 'Q' leader was Frank Quilici (Minnesota Twins) with 10. I may hold that great honor a while. I don't think Dan Quisenberry is any threat, do you?"

• Did you see that the New York Times moved Iowa up from eighth to fourth in its computerized rating system?

That might be acceptable if Michigan didn't keep its No. 2 spot this week. The Times explained the computer puts heavy emphasis on the home-field advantage, and Iowa won by only two points over Michigan.

Well, you must be aware of what the computer experts admit: "Garbage input equals garbage output."

and three touchdowns. Harmon also caught six passes for 64 yards.

Fry had praise for Northwestern quarterback Mike Greenfield, who has been the starter since replacing Sandy Schwab, then injured, last season. Greenfield is a dual threat, having run 85 times and passed 119 in six games. He has gained 226 yards rushing and been sacked for 185 yards in losses.

"Greenfield might be the toughest quarterback in the league because he has taken some shots that would put some guys on stretchers," Fry playoffs, and now they hoped to do the same against St. Louis.

"CHARACTER, I GUESS, is what keeps us coming back," Royals third baseman George Brett said. "It's really hard to explain. Today, before the game, everybody was poised and comfortable and ready to play."

The Cardinals, meanwhile, seemed more like the team showing pressure. Slick-fielding shortstop Ozzie Smith made an error that led to a run, and fan favorite Tito Landrum had a rough day. Landrum let runners move up to second and third on a flyout in the first, leading to one run; misplayed a fly ball into a double, leading to the game-winning run in the second; and let another ball go over his head in the ninth for an RBI double.

Jackson, who worked seven effective innings in Game 1 before he left for a pinch hitter, was a little less effective in Game 5, but he was good enough. He gave up a first-inning run on Jack Clark's double and pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the third, but he retired 11 batters in a row before Landrum reached on an infield single with one out in the bottom of the ninth.

In fact, after Forsch's exit in the second inning, St. Louis actually had the better of the pitching as relievers Rickey Horton, Bill Campbell, Todd Worrell and Jeff Lahti Jefferson's comeback, necessitated when Kennedy controlled 13-6 at the half, started as the fourth quarter opened. After Kennedy's Brett Sokol punted 38 yards to the end zone, the J-Hawks started from the 20.

What followed was an impressive 80-yard drive which consumed almost half the period and featured some crucial plays, including two third down conversions and one on fourth.

Matt Usher didn't pass much but one of his completions to Dave Reid was on third down during that drive. Damon Robinson's seven-yard run was another third down conversion.

On fourth and one at the Cougar 36, Usher burst up the middle for 18 yards and a personal foul was tacked on after the play, giving the J-Hawks first and goal at the nine. Meier carried twice, the second time for three yards and the score, bringing Jeff within 13-12.

Kennedy took over with a chance to run out the clock but on third and eight from the 21, Brian Dixon tried to throw deep and Heiken came up with his big play.

"We felt we needed another first down when we had the ball get intercepted," Kennedy Coach Al Stiers said. "I called the play, nobody else, and it's easy for me to second guess right now."

The passing combo of Usher and Reid connected for nine yards on a fourth and seven and Robinson had runs of eight and six yards to keep the game-winning drive alive.

Heiken's second interception iced the decision for the J-Hawks as time expired.

"I think Kennedy has come on great in the latter part of the season and they played hard tonight," Calloway said.

"We are a much, much better football team now than we were before," Stiers said. "It took a real good effort from Jefferson to beat us."

Dixon led all rushers with 75 yards, including a 65-yard TD run on Kennedy's third play and Frank DeShaw added 70 but Jefferson limited the Cougars to 26 second half yards.
