Not much beef this autumn

he Iowa football program knows how to work a crowd. You go to a comedy club, they don't bring out the funniest comedian first.

You go to a rock concert, they don't open with the hottest band on the bill. You go to a restaurant, they don't start you with the filet mignon. You have season tickets to see the Hawkeye footballers, they aren't going to give you the season's best pairing right out of the box. With no disrespect toward Northern Iowa — which is ranked a lot higher in Division I-AA (4th) than Iowa is in Division I-A (20th) — but this is an opening act, an appetizer.

The problem with this year's Iowa schedule is that you can't find the beef. And if you do consider the remaining home games of Tulsa, Illinois, Indiana, Purdue and Minnesota beef, it might be the kind that E. coli bacteria call home.

How can every I-A team on your home schedule be coming off a losing season? How can all four conference home games feature teams that achieved so little in 1996 that their coaches were exiled?

It is not true that the ticket slogan at Iowa this year is "Come See Us Kick People (When They're Down).'

The Big Ten schedule isn't Iowa's fault, of course. Last year, the Hawks caught eventual league co-champions Ohio State and Northwestern at home.

As for playing Northern Iowa, well, it doesn't seem all that appealing now, but it was a move that was widely praised at the time it was made. Better to give the visitors' slice of the gate to an in-state amigo rather than Central Michigan, Northern Illinois or some other non-conference pushover.

That sentiment still stands, but it would be nice if Iowa didn't see the need to bring in a featherweight at all. Central Michigan comes back to Iowa City in 1998, and Northern Illinois returns this way the following year.

In the real world of college football, though, Nebraska rolled out the red carpet for Akron last Saturday and will warmly greet Central Florida next Saturday. Ohio State should send its own jet to Bowling Green to fly the Falcons to Columbus next Saturday.

Still, the fact 8,000 tickets remained for Saturday's game at Kinnick as of Tuesday tells you that you can't fool all of the people all of the time. Iowa will probably end up with a crowd of 65,000 for UNI, a whole lot of folks no matter how you slice it.

One does wonder how many seats would be sold for that game if Iowa didn't peddle season tickets. A lot of fans pay for the bad games to be assured seats for the better ones. Most would go to all of them anyway for the total college football experience, but some would skip Saturday's contest if they weren't already buying it.

In fact, some will skip it, especially since the game is televised. If you don't want to fork over $26 at the box office, you might be able to get a last-minute ticket from someone for, oh, $25.50. Or $25. Do I hear $20? . .

WHILE UNI-IOWA is one of many probable mismatches across this weekend's college football landscape, Los Angeles is the site of two luscious inter-regional clashes Saturday.

Florida State plays USC at the L.A. Coliseum and Tennessee visits UCLA at the Rose Bowl.

Big crowds, big excitement. What if USC or UCLA opened up with a Division I-AA team? They would be ignored by a public with a thousand other entertainment options. You do what you can get away with. Iowa and Nebraska are among those college programs that are the only game in town. If Iowa's football program moved to Los Angeles, two things would change in a hurry. One, it wouldn't be called "Iowa" anymore. Two, the Northerns and Centrals of the world would never be seen again.

The Kernels swung the bat Thursday, rapping out 12 hits. But they squandered three home runs and a nifty pitching performance by southpaw Jason Stockstill in suffering their first loss in three postseason games. They swept Burlington to reach the semis.

The Kernels trailed, 6-4, with one out in the ninth inning when Juan Rodriguez and Eric Gillespie stroked back-to-back singles. Shawn Wooten then greeted Kane County reliever Mark Richards with an RBI double into the left-field corner that put the tying run at third and winning run at second.

Banks was a great replacement when Shaw got hurt last year. Now Rob Thein and Doug Miller must be able to do the same.

Fullbacks — Michael Burger is a solid blocker, runner and receiver. He could be a big weapon when defenses concentrate on Banks and Tim Dwight. Thein, who rotates between tailback and fullback, is the No. 2 guy here, according to Coach Hayden Fry, even though Trevor

He could finish No. 1 in school history in all categories. He's also dangerous on reverses. Rotating QBs face Cyclones

By Mike Koolbeck

Gazette sportswriter

Here comes another case of quarterback roulette for the Iowa State football team's defense.

Wyoming Coach Dana Dimel said Thursday he plans to rotate quarterbacks Jeremy Silcox and Jay Stoner when the Cowboys host Iowa State. Kickoff is 3 p.m. (Iowa time) Saturday at War Memorial Stadium in Laramie, Dimel said he was pleased with the play of Silcox, a fifthyear senior, in the Cowboys' season-opening, 24-10, loss at Ohio State last week. But he said Stoner, a red-shirt freshman, has been coming on strong in practice and deserves a chance to play.

"I know I talked about going with one guy before the season started," said Dimel, Wyoming's first-year coach. "And Jeremy's a senior I feel very comfortable about. But Jay Stoner has just been doing a fantastic job and getting better and better with every practice.

"So, we're going to start Jeremy, but we're going to play Jay just as much, at least for this first game. That's the formula that took Ohio State to the No. 2 spot in the nation last year."

Dimel said the two most likely will alternate quarters against Iowa State. But in future games, he'll play them both and "then go with whoever has the hot hand.

Oklahoma State employed a similar strategy against Iowa State last Saturday night at Ames, when red-shirt freshman Tony Lindsay came off the bench and guided the Cowboys to a 21-14 come-from-behind victory.

Both quarterbacks are likely be well prepared for the Cyclones (0-1). Dimel, at 34 the youngest coach in NCAA Division I-A, was offensive coordinator at Kansas State the past two seasons when the Wildcats whipped the Dan McCarneycoached Cyclones by an aggregate score of 84-27.

"At K-State we were one of those teams, just because of the mentality of our head coach, that while most teams watch four games from the season, we'd watch all of them," Dimel said. "So I've seen every game Iowa State's played since McCarney's been there. We're really familiar with what they do."

Last year, Kansas State's Mike Lawrence ran for 256 yards against Iowa State and Wyoming quarterback Josh Wallwork passed for 386 yards.

"Our offense is so diverse, that they don't know each week what we're going to come out in." he said. "We could come out this week with no backs or we could come out with two backs and run the ball."

Nelson travels to 'home' game

"I would have picked Nebraska over Iowa anytime," he said.

Although he said "I have nothing to prove," Nelson said he'd like to show the state - and nation, for that matter - that Northern Iowa is a good team.

"We haven't been given any respect," he said. "Nobody's picking us to win. I guess nobody should expect us to win but us. "We're not going to let the underdog role take us under."

And don't tell Nelson the Panthers have nothing to lose.

"We want to win, too," he said. "Nobody likes to lose."

In his first year at UNI, the 6-foot-1, 263-pound Nelson made quite an impact. Starting just five of UNI's 14 games last fall, he finished with 41 tackles and four sacks to earn a spot on the Gateway Conference's all-Newcomer team.

flashy numbers.

"I would like to have all that (postseason) recognition, but it's not going to rain on my season if I don't," he said. "I just want to win games."

And he wants another ring.

He won two national championship rings while at Nebraska — including one his red-shirt year — and last year picked up another ring when UNI won the Gateway title.

"If I would have stayed at Nebraska last year, I wouldn't have gotten a ring," he said.

"Every year I get ring. Hopefully, I'll get another ring.'

Life in Cedar Falls has been a big adjustment for Nelson, who lived in San Diego before moving to Iowa City during his sophomore year.

"It's all right," he said. "It's smaller than Nebraska (and) the social life is not like San Diego.

"But it's a nice environment to get your education. The guys on the team help me survive.

"That was what we wanted," Jones said. "We practice that play every day in infield. We had a number of options (with the bases loaded), going to second base or first base. And we had a guy in there who throws a lot of ground balls.

Kernels Manager Mario Mendoza said Ham "hit the ball so hard it made it into an easy double play."

UNLIKE THE GAME against Burlington, when Kernels batters showed amazing patience in working pitchers to favorable hitting counts, Ham swung at the first pitch from Richards.

'This guy was right there," Mendoza said. "I told Ham to be ready and he was. He hit the ball real good right at him. That's baseball for you."

Solo home runs by E.J. t'Hoen and Gillespie in the Cedar Rapids fifth, off former Wilton prep Tim McClaskey, had boosted the Kernels' lead to 4-1.

Kane County scored all five of its runs in the seventh inning with two outs. A three-run home run by Tyrone Horne off reliever Keith Volkman (0-1) tied the game, 4-4. Horne, a nine-year minor league veteran who played last season at the Triple level, was the first batter Volkman faced in relief of Stockstill, who scattered seven hits over 6% innings.

Volkman then walked Jon Heinrichs, who stole second and scored the go-ahead run when Ryan Robertson smoked a

THE KERNELS LOADED the bases in the bottom of the seventh when Rodriguez lined a one-out double and Gillespie walked. Nelson Lara, a 19-yearold Dominican fireballer, came on and struck out Wooten before walking Guiel to load the bases. Lara fanned Ham, who had doubled and tripled in three previous at bats, to end the inning.

Geoff Duncan pitched a perfect eighth inning for Kane County before getting into trouble in the ninth. Rodgers, the Cougars' sixth pitcher of the night, nailed down the save.

"I still have confidence we can go over there and win two games," Mendoza said. "These guys don't have any quit in them. They won't die. Hopefully, we'll put together a five-game hitting streak to end the season. We've done that before.'
