Michigan won't forfeit games for ineligibility

ANN ARBOR, Mich. -Michigan won't have to forfeit any football games for using an ineligible freshman player.

Michigan last month reported an administrative error involving safety Artis Chambers to the Big Ten. Chambers played in three games, including a 14-9 victory over Penn State, but wasn't eligible under conference freshman rules.

He will keep his athletics scholarship and can continue practicing with the team, but he will miss the rest of the season. The conference said Michigan will not have to forfeit games.

Hawkeyes not ready to jump ship amid slide

Iowa wants to regain confidence on road

IOWA CITY — Sophomore linebacker A.J. Edds has heard the less-than-flattering talk from University of Iowa students about this season's Hawkeye football team.

The Hawkeyes have run their Big Ten losing streak to seven games, and they can't defend the spread offense, as shown by Indiana last Satur-

The Hawkeyes can't let losses continue to pile up if they want to entertain postseason possibilities.

Rivalry from both sides

West Branch legend Cook leads Regina in key clash

By Jeff Dahn

The Gazette The state's biggest Class 1A football game to date this season will be played tonight at West Branch's Little Rose Bowl.

Sixth-ranked Iowa City Regina, a program that has been to the playoffs each of the last three years and won the state championship ranked Pekin. in 2005, will pay a visit to fifth-ranked West Branch, whose run of four straight playoff appearances was interrupted last year despite an 8-1 record.

Both teams are 5-0 overall and 3-0 in rugged 1A District 6, which also includes unbeaten and third-

The stands will be packed as fans from both schools gather to watch what promises to be an entertaining football game while also noting the return of new Regina coach Marv Cook to his old hometown.

Cook was a two-time allstater for West Branch

Coach Butch Pedersen in 1983 and '84 before moving on to an all-American career at Iowa and two Pro Bowl appearances in a seven-year NFL career. But now he's in his first coaching job at Regina and he's not dwelling on his first

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Listen to baseball "experts," and you'll hear a lot of talk about, well, team X and Y are pretty even, but X has been tough at home, so I'll go with them.

Pretty solid logic, right? Usually goes without much opposition.

Heck, just Tuesday, Red Sox Manager Terry Francona used that line Cubs trail thinking in talking ■ The Arizona about his Diamondbacks team' led the Chicago first-round Cubs, 8-2, in the series sixth inning of an against the NL playoff game Angels when this issue during a went to press. news conference at Fenway Park.

"I know that at their place they have one of the best home records in baseball." he said. "So getting them here, hopefully that will mean something.

In the last five years, the team with home-field advantage has won just 13 of 35 series. Last year, the only home team to win was the Mets in a National League first-round series, and they ended up losing game seven of the NL Championship Series at Shea Stadium.

No wonder Angels Manager Mike Scioscia used the final days of the regular season to line up the pitching matchups he wanted instead of going for the AL's best record. Scioscia knows that in baseball, the pitching advantage is far more valuable than home-field advantage.

This isn't like other sports. In the NFL, home playoff teams are 32-18 the last five years. In the NBA, teams with home-court advantage have won 55 of 75 series during the same time period. You could argue the NBA numbers are a bit distorted by early mismatches, but the No. 4 seeds are 7-3 against No. 5 seeds.

Yes, being at home matters. In those other sports.

It's strange, too, because baseball is the only sport of the big three that gives the home team an actual advantage and features different playing dimensions from stadium to stadium. The home team bats last and knows its park better than anybody.

"Coming up with the Rockies, you know, people ask you about our ballpark," Rockies starter Jeff Francis said. "I guess you always kind of wait until you get there and you kind of realize that it's the same for both teams.'

Those are real edges, and yet home field matters far less in baseball than it does in the NFL or NBA.

79-yard TD run. That was a great game for us," said Martino, who has thrown 15 touchdown passes, 10 during a three-game winning streak. "Every game this year for us has been really close, barnburners. It's just good to get new people in and it was just a great game for us.

"Our defense stepped up and we were just this close from a shutout. If we can start clicking like that on both sides of the ball like this all year, good things will just keep happening.' Kennedy (4-2) finished with 502 total yards, the third straight game over the 500-yard mark. Johnson carried the ball only four times but finished with 100 rushing yards thanks to his 79-yard scoring scamper. The real good news for the Cougars was the play of their defense. West (0-6) finished with 192 total yards but had only 79 in the first

West had eight first-half possessions, seven ended with punts and one with an intercep tion. The Trojans' only glimmer of hope was provided by tailback Aaron Martin, who carried 26 times for 89 yards and scored West's only TD on a 25-yard pass from Kyle ship over everything. "We need to get back on track quick." There's no better time than this Saturday The Hawkeyes gave the Badgers all they could handle in their last road trip, playing with the lead in the fourth quarter.

Another close loss, however, isn't what they are looking for this time around.

"If we go out there and play hard and lose, it will be demoralizing to see that we're not getting the wins," Eubanks said. "We just want a win right now."
